2. Strategic policing and crime news

Crime outcomes in England and Wales 2014 to 2015

Crime outcomes in England and Wales 2014 to 2015' presents statistics on crime outcomes assigned by the police. This is the first bulletin based entirely on the new outcomes framework which was initially introduced in April 2013 and expanded further to a broader framework in April 2014. This also introduces a new preferred measure for outcomes data, by presenting the outcomes assigned by the police to all offences recorded in the year (2014 to 2015). It replaces the previous 'Crimes detected' bulletins, which focuses on a narrower subset of 'detections'.

Police workforce, England and Wales: 31 March 2015

Statistics cover police officers, police staff, police community support officers, designated officers and special constables.

Home Secretary announces terms of reference for undercover policing inquiry

The Inquiry, which was set up in March, will investigate undercover policing units – including the Special Demonstration Squad (SDS) and National Public Order Intelligence Unit – operating in England and Wales since 1968, including the extent to which they targeted individuals and groups such as political and social justice campaigns. Theresa May also establishes miscarriages of justice panel to sit alongside inquiry following Mark Ellison's review

5. Reviews and Inspections

HM Inspectorate of Prisons publishes prisoner communications report - majority of calls to MPs listened to in error

There is no evidence of a widespread, deliberate attempt to monitor communications between prisoners and MPs and the majority of calls were downloaded for listening in error, said Nick Hardwick, Chief Inspector of Prisons. He has published a report of the second stage of an inquiry into prison communications.

HM Inspectorate of Prisons: Prisons in decline across all areas, warns Chief Inspector

Outcomes in prisons reported on by the inspectorate declined across all areas in 2014-15 and were the worst for ten years, said Nick Hardwick, Chief Inspector of Prisons. Today he published his last annual report before his term of office ends in January next year. However, the small number of women's prisons and establishments holding children had not declined in the same way as adult men's prisons, he added. All of the prisons inspectors were most concerned about in 2013-14 which had been inspected in 2014-15 had made significant improvements thanks to effective leadership, very hard work by staff and some investment in the environment.

Her Majesty's Inspector of Constabulary

In harm's way - the role of the police in keeping children safe.

Building the picture: an inspection of police information management

HMIC conducted a review of the business processes which police forces in England and Wales use to collect, record, process, evaluate and share information.
