Data sharing to prevent fraud

After conducting a survey into the data sharing arrangements between public authorities and Specified Anti-Fraud Organisations (SAFOs), the ICO has published a report reviewing how these organisations share data to prevent fraud. The review report looks at the data sharing arrangements already in place and establishes whether they meet the recommendations in our statutory Code of Practice on Data Sharing, the Home Office's Data Sharing for the Prevention of Fraud Code of Practice and the requirements of the DPA.

Feedback on ICO Big Data report

Last year the ICO published a discussion paper on big data and data protection. In the paper they invited responses to three key questions:

- Does the paper adequately reflect the data protection issues arising from big data?
- What further guidance, if any, should our office provide?
- Are other practical measures and tools needed to protect data privacy?

The summary of the feedback has now been published.

Privacy and Electronic Communications Regulations (PECR)

The ICO's website has been updated to make it easier to access information about the PECR. The new pages have been designed as a plain language guide to enable you to navigate your way through our PECR guidance.
