1. Policy and Practice

New National Strategy for Police Custody – 13th January 2017

National Police Chiefs' Council publishes consistent principles to ensure forces are using custody in a legitimate, effective and efficient way. The strategy takes account of the increased focus on vulnerability, scrutiny and collaboration and aims to ensure that all detainees, particularly those that are vulnerable, are treated with respect and their rights protected. The strategy sets out a number of aspirations which include; eliminating the use of police custody for Mental Health Act detentions; ensuring children are only held in custody as a last resort; encouraging innovative but appropriate alternatives to custody; utilising opportunities to collaborate where it will save money or help us work better and; consistently identifying and managing risk

Disabled Police Association Vision for 2017 – 16th January 2017

The Disabled Police Association launches strategic vision for ensuring and promoting fair and equal treatment of disabled people in policing; increasing strategic engagement on behalf of disabled people with key stakeholders in policing; and improving the policing service delivered to disabled people within communities

Package of measures announced to transform Mental Health support – 9th January 2017

Prime Minister announces package of reforms which include a new green paper on children and young people's mental health to set out plans to transform services in schools, universities and for families, a new partnership with employers to improve mental health support in the workplace, further alternatives to hospital to support people in the community, investing in and expanding digital mental health services and new ways to right the injustices people with mental health problems face, including a formal review of the mental health debt form

Suicide Prevention: Progress Report 2015/16 – 9th January 2017

Third annual progress report on delivery against the cross-government suicide prevention strategy. The 2012 strategy has also been extended to include self-harm prevention in its own right; deliver improvements in suicide bereavement support; better target suicide prevention and support and improve data at both a national and local level. The strategy also supports the recommendations of the Mental Health Taskforce's Five Year Forward View for Mental Health in aiming to reduce the number of suicides by 10% by the year ending March 2021 and ensuring every local area has a multi-agency suicide prevention plan in place by the end of 2017

Plans to increase maximum sentence for stalking - 6th January 2017

Justice Minister announces plans via Policing and Crime Bill to double the maximum custodial sentence for stalking from 5 to 10 years and from 7 to 14 years if the offence was racially or religiously aggravated

Families of murder victims to receive enhanced support – 17th January 2017

Bereaved families will be offered a series of meetings with the CPS and the police which will include a joint meeting with both following completion of their full reviews into the case. This will provide an opportunity for families to learn as much possible about the case such as reasons for acquittal and steps that can be taken

Faulty by design: The state of public-service commissioning – 18th January 2017

Report from the Reform think tank evaluates the success of current approaches to public service commissioning and concludes that commissioning bodies are not delivering value for money in respect of:-

- Focusing on outcomes that matter to service users - success is being measured by outputs and inputs, with commissioners feeling they do not possess the skills to design outcomes-based contracts
- Integrating services to maximise effectiveness - commissioning bodies are fragmented and ambiguity of responsibility for service design is leading to duplication, gaps in delivery and failure to prevent demand
- Devolution – centralised approaches are undermining the transformation and integration of public services and creating a postcode lottery across in healthcare, welfare-to-work and probation services

Rebalancing Act – New resource for reducing health inequalities in the CJS – 11th January 2017

Revolving Doors Agency, Public Health England and Home Office advice for Directors of Public Health, Police and Crime Commissioners and other health and justice commissioners. The product explores ways in which partnerships can be strengthened to address health inequalities faced by those in contact with the criminal justice system. It provides an overview of key health inequalities experienced by the offending population, considers associations between health and social care needs with offending and reoffending behaviour; and identifies relevant stakeholders and how they can work together to address these needs

Learning the Lessons Bulletin: Transgender Prisoners – 10th January 2017

Prisons and Probation Ombudsman bulletin drawing on recommendations from investigations into deaths in custody and complaint investigations. The bulletin highlights six lessons to better protect transgender prisoners:

- Evaluating the location of a transgender prisoner based on an individual assessment of their needs
- All those involved in transgender prisoner's care attending ACCT case reviews (suicide / self-harm)
- Meaningfully investigating all allegations of transphobic bullying and harassment and taking action
- Officers having meaningful contact with transgender prisoners and being aware of their vulnerabilities
- Local policies that are in line with national guidance - not imposing unfair additional restrictions
- Reasonable adjustments to help transgender prisoners live in their gender role

2. Research, Development and Statistics

Crime in England and Wales: year ending September 2016 – Published 19th January 2017

Latest figures from the Crime Survey for England and Wales (CSEW) indicate that crime levels to September 2016 saw no significant change on the previous year (around 6.2 million). Headline estimates on prevalence of fraud and computer misuse offences were reported based on the first complete year of Crime Survey data. These offences are estimated to account for an additional 5.6 million crimes not previously captured via the survey. Police recorded crime increased by 8% - largely due to improvements in crime recording practices and processes. Fraud offences referred to the police increased by 3%, while industry data showed that frauds on UK-issued cards increased by 39%. CSEW estimates showed no significant change in levels of violence compared to a 22% increase in police recorded violent crime – affected in part by the inclusion of 2 additional harassment offences as notifiable offences. The report highlights smaller genuine increases in some lower volume but high harm categories of police recorded violent crime, including homicide (+5% excluding 96 historic cases resulting from Hillsborough 1989 verdict) and knife crime (+11%). Total police recorded theft offences have remained stable, however, there have been increases in vehicle offences (+6%), theft from person (+6%), shoplifting (+5%) and domestic burglary (+3%) over the last year. Data available at police force level

Crime Outcomes in England and Wales to September 2016 – Published 19th January 2017

Police recorded crime outcome data to September 2016 highlights reductions in the proportion of crimes resulting in a positive outcomes over the previous year, including the proportion resulting in charge or summons (12%) and formal (3%) and informal (3.5%) out of court disposals. The proportion of cases that could not be progressed due to evidential difficulties (24%) increased marginally, while the proportion that are yet to be assigned an outcome has increased from 4% to 8%. Figures should be considered in the context of increased crime recording compliance over the last year, including a higher number of low level offences being recorded.

Victim Personal Statement: Victim Inequality 2015/16 – 18th January 2017

Victims' Commissioner publishes analysis of data on the offer of Victim Personal Statements (VPS) based on findings from the Crime Survey for England and Wales between 2013 and 2016. The report shows that only 15% of victims were offered the opportunity to make a VPS in 2015/16 – a level which has remained relatively stable over the last three years. The proportion of victims taking up the opportunity to make a VPS increased from 51% to 61% between 2015 and 2016. 31% wanted to read out their VPS in court in 2015/16, a figure which has fallen from 38% over the last year. The proportion of victims feeling that their VPS was taken into account saw a significant reduction between 2013/14 and 2015/16 from 69% to 57%. Victims less likely to be offered a VPS include older people (8%) those that are married (12%) and those that live in rural areas (12%)

4. Reviews and Inquiries

Policing for the Future Inquiry launched – 12th January 2017

The Home Affairs Committee inquiry launched to explore the challenges of modern policing and to examine whether police forces are sufficiently equipped and resourced to keep the public safe and to respond effectively to evolving demands. The inquiry will consider current and future crime trends and their implications for policing, gaps in capacity and capability, the relationship between public expectations of the police and operational realities, police funding levels, efficiency, cost effectiveness and the role of PCCs in driving innovation and reform and the role of digital technology in policing

Syrian Vulnerable Persons Resettlement Programme report published – 13th January 2017

Public Accounts Committee inquiry report commends central government, local agencies for their efforts to date, but highlights a lack of clarity around responsibilities and entitlements under the programme which could threaten its success in the long-term. The Committee expressed particular concerns that some councils are confused about what they are expected to provide to refugees and exactly how this should be funded. It also found uncertainty as to whether survivors of torture or violence are getting specialist help and that measurements of programme's success are too vague
